TINLEY PARK HOMECOMING EVENT GOT UNDER WAY WEDNESDAY TO A GOOD START; WILL RUN TILL SUNDAY

Queen Contest Creating Excitement In Entire Area: Race Between Two Tinley Girls and One From Mokena

Former Mokena Boy Killed in Accident

Mokena friends received word last Tuesday of the death of Pfc. John Mau, son of the late Emil and Mrs. Dorothy Nommensen, the latter of Chicago.

John was born in Silver Cross hospital, Joliet, when his parents lived in Mokena. He would have been in the army one year in August. He was located in a North Carolina Camp.

Details of his death are rather vague, but it appears that a group had gone swimming and was returning by car when an accident occurred. A sergeant was driving and John was in the front seat with him. Two other buddies were in the rear seat. From information received, John was killed outright, the sergeant, at the time of the funeral, was still in an unconscious condition.

Surviving is his mother, a brother Edwin; a step-father, step-brother and two step-sisters; other relatives, and many friends in Mokena.

Funeral services were held Saturday in a funeral home in Chicago with Rev. John Spaid officiating. Cremation followed.

Couple Celebrates 35th Anniversary At Green Garden

About 175 friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Ulrich in Green Garden Saturday, June 11 when they held open house in honor of their 35th wedding anniversary.

The home was decorated with baskets of spring flowers.

Hostesses for the day were Mrs. Lloyd Coleman, Mrs. Mary Bettenhausen and Mrs. Christina Kropf.

In charge of kitchen arrangements were, Mrs. Elmer Morrison, Mrs. Howard Kline, Mrs. Harvey Rosendahl and Mrs. Gilbert Schumley.

Ice cream and cake and punch were served from a table laid with a white linen cover and centered with a crystal bowl of coral colored gladioli, flanked by white candles in crystal holders. Presiding at the serving were, Mrs. Frank Heisner, Mrs. Edwin Dralle, Mrs. Alvin Wanner and Mrs. Harold Ulrich.

Dinner was served to forty relatives and friends on the lawn of the home. Carol and Kathryn Ulrich, granddaughters of the celebrants, were in charge of the guest book. Elmer Morrison took pictures during the day, of the group.

Among the guests were Mrs. Herman Welp and Mrs. Marie Vinzens of Chicago who served as bridesmaids at the wedding 35 years ago.

Courses Offered

The Joliet township high school and Junior college is announcing two courses to be offered at Joliet during this summer by the Northern Illinois State Teachers' college, DeKalb.

Three semester hours of senior college credits will be given for each course.

Information and registration blanks may be had by contacting Mr. Louis F. Bottino, County superintendent of schools at Joliet; Elmer Rowley, dean of Joliet Junior college, Joliet; or James H. Cherry, general assistant superintendent of Joliet township high school and Junior college, Joliet.

The courses can only be offered if sufficient enrollment has been secured by Monday, July 25. It is hoped that enrollment in these courses will justify setting Joliet up as a permanent center for this type of service from the Northern Illinois State Teachers' college. If Joliet becomes a permanent center, courses will be available during the school year and summer.

Parker, Lockport, produced an average of 377 pounds of butterfat and 10,472 pounds of milk in the official Herd Improvement Registry program of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

SWEDISH PICNIC

A picnic was held in the Frankfort Grove last Sunday by the Swedish people. A large accordion band entertained in the afternoon, and dancing was the evening's diversion.

Wednesday marked a red letter day for all of Tinley Park when the 8th annual Homecoming opened for a four day run. After much promotion work on the part of the Fireman's committee composed of various civic organizations in the community, the program scheduled got under way with a "bang."

The event that is causing the most excitement, not only in the village, but in the entire surrounding territory is the crowning of the Homecoming queen, scheduled for Friday night. The standings in the queen contest as of June 14 are: Shirley O'Neil in first place, Marilyn Weskowski in second and Beverly Hall of Mokena in third. But we understand that there are a lot of votes yet to be counted—so anything can happen before the winner is announced.

The queen and her two ladies in waiting their male guests will be taken with the compliments of the Firemen. To some of the Chicago better night spots. Also the queen chosen will be presented with a complete summer outfit.

Also scheduled for the big event are rides and concessions so that those of this area—young and old—can attend and have fun!

Last but not least on the program will be a parade which will feature many floats entered by the business men and other organizations of Tinley.

For those who haven't bought their admission tickets they are available at Saenger grove...Come...and have fun!

Orland Fire Dept. Wins Water Fight Against Markham

The Orland Park fire department won for themselves quite a distinction last year by winning first place in several local water fight tournaments, and by winning second place in the state tournament, made a good start again this year.

The first water fight to be played this year was last week end at Markham when Orland won first place in that tournament.

Playing first on Friday was Orland vs. Steger, with Orland winning. This was the most outstanding contest as Steger was fighting for vengeance because they lost to Orland last year.

Saturday, Orland played South Holland, and won, and Sunday, they teamed again Phoenix, and also won. The prize was $25 in cash which was divided among the winning men.

The date has not been announced as yet for the next water fight tournament, but it is understood, that it will be soon. It looks as if Orland is earning a name of "Winners" seeing how the baseball players are winning and how the fire lads also.

Under The Cross Of Malta

Post 450 of the V.F.W. organization in Mokena has started in earnest in the construction of their new home on Wolfe road south of the railroad tracks. At the open meeting, which was scheduled for last Thursday night in Hatch's hall was attended by the village president, Harold Spiess and Fire chief, Barney Hostert as well as many other citizens, where plans were discussed whereby the V.F.W. intends to start a drum and bugle corps among the young folks of the village. All civic organizations are asked to co-operate in this civic project.

A number of the members attended the 5th district meeting last Sunday held at Bensonville including Eino Sarella, commander, Glen Peterson, Fred Hensch and Marshall Muller. A number of ladies from the Auxiliary also attended.

"Dog's Best Friend" Helps Owners With Pet Problems

You have heard of the dog as "Man's Best Friend."

Now meet the man who rates as the "Dog's Best Friend."

He is Harry Miller, of New York, who as director of the Gaines Dog Research Center devotes his time to helping dog-owners get the most help and joy from their pet.

Clive Howard takes eight pages in Pageant Magazine to tell of Miller and his organization's dog activities.

According to Howard, the Center is "the only organization in the world actively collecting, evaluating and passing along to breeders, veterinarians and owners every known worthwhile fact concerning the health and well-being of dogs" and Miller, "who has long devoted all his energy to broadcasting the facts of better dog care and nutrition," is credited with being in some measure responsible for the fact that dogs today have a longer life span than ever before.

Miller's office at 250 Park Ave. is a veritable "clearing house for dog data." Each year he and his staff answer thousands of questions on almost every conceivable dog topic, but his greatest service is in answering questions on the care and training of dogs. In this the extensive Center library of dog publications is a great help. In a great many cases, an inquirer's situation is met by the mailing of a dog booklet, of which the Center has a great number on all sorts of dog subjects.

Here are some typical questions: What to do about the puppy that whimpers all night? How to keep a dog from getting sick? Do dogs really have a superior sense of smell? How do you keep a dog from jumping on people or on the furniture when the family is out? And, of course that perennial, "Which dog breed is best?"

Miller believes that the law should require owners, rather than the dog, to be licensed. This would put responsibility where it properly belongs. He also recommends that all dogs be taught certain duties, such as fetching the master's slippers or the daily paper, on the ground that nothing satisfies the dog's

A RACKET? AN EDITORIAL

After talks with a number of merchants in Mokena, it seems that there is finally a "racket" started. We understand that a local law enforcement officer canvassed all business men in the community telling them that he would watch their interests, try their doors, etc., for the sum of $5.00 per month.

There are a lot of these merchants who don't go for the idea, they say, stating that they were under the impression that by paying their taxes, they were automatically entitled to police protection—both day and night.

The paper the law enforcement officer had was evidently okayed by the village board for it was signed by the president. Although on investigating we find that this subject was not brought up at their last meeting—or any other meeting for that matter.

But as late as Wednesday we hear that residences also are being solicited for the same protection.

Whether the village board sponsored this little income making job without thinking, we're at a loss to know. But certainly a board of men elected by the citizens of a community would not suffer the taxpayers to pay twice for police protection in the village, once in the payment of taxes and again in monthly installments! This is a proposition that is serious enough for the village board as well as the voters in Mokena to get straightened out. The question comes up: How can a local police officer be expected to enforce a law, take closing hours, for instance, when he at the same time is collecting $5.00 a month from the same business establishments?

NEW BUSINESS IN FRANKFORT

Glenn Warming of Frankfort has opened a new business in that village which is known by the name of Warming Oil. It is located on Center road and deals in the Marathon oil products of gas, oil and lubricants.

Letter To The Editor

To the people of Frankfort, Lincoln Estates and Mokena:

In answer to the article in June 2 issue concerning my controversy with Mr. Joe Kohl, Assessor, I want to give my side of the affair. I called Mr. Kohl and asked him to give me full details of taxes of a group of people. He presented me with an illegible list and I told him I was not satisfied with it. Words were exchanged between us whereon Mr. Kohl became abusive to me. I suggested we see someone in the neighborhood, he agreed, we went to a neighbor and friend. After a few minutes of discussion in this friend's home, I remarked, "I am sorry I came here," and then left. I stated: "Mr. Kohl, you walk outside, we have something to settle for abusing me in my home." I went and he started for home on the adjacent driveway of this friend. That is where the incident occurred. After we were parted by this friend, I left.

Mr. Kohl called constable Knipple, and we went to the court of J. P. Balaz in Mokena. I want to present you with the court procedure:

A warrant was issued for my arrest, then I demanded a warrant for the arrest of Mr. Kohl, Knipple and J. P. Continued on back page

Thief Breaks Into Everett Cooper's Home Sunday Morning

While the Everett Cooper family were at church Sunday morning between 8 and 9:45 o'clock Sunday morning, a thief broke into their home.

Entrance was gained through a window in the bedroom of Mrs. Kate Cooper and Miss Celia Cooper, and money taken belonging to the latter two from that room.

By the evidence left, they have an idea who the culprit is.

THE LOTUS AND WATER LILIES

By Robert Mann, Supt. of Conservation

In midsummer, when the weather is hot and sultry, Mother Nature put on an extravagant flower show. She uses just one kind of Blossom. Completely covering hundreds of acres of water in shallow lakes or sluggish streams, are dense almost impenetrable beds of plants with huge leaves like elephant ears and stately creamy-yellow flowers as fragrant as they are beautiful. This is the American Lotus, closely akin to the Egyptian lotus and the sacred lotus of the Hindus.

The American lotus grows in quiet water from two to five feet deep, where its big leaves and flowers usually stand a foot or two above the surface on thick stiff stems rising from fleshy rootstalks buried in the mud. It has several leathery dark green leaves, almost circular and from one to two or more feet in diameter, each balanced at its center, like a platter, on the stem. The great flower buds open into blossoms, 6 to 10 inches across, with broad petals and sepals. These are followed by conical seed capsules, often the size of a man's fist. From one or two dozen seeds are set in pits in the flat top of the capsule, which breaks off and floats about, scattering the seeds.

These seeds, about the size of a white oak acorn, have a very hard shell. The Indians roasted them and ate them like peanuts, or ground them into meal to make bread, mush or dumplings. They are starchy, rich in oil, and have a flavor much like chestnuts. A few descendants of pioneer families in the Illinois valley still make enough flower from lotus seeds to bake a holiday cake once a year. The rootstock, which has somewhat the flavor of a sweetpotato when boiled, was also eaten by the Indians. This lotus is found from Massachusetts to Minnesota and south to Florida and Texas, but it is thought that the Indians carried it across the Allegheny mountains to the east coast for its food value. In the Chicago region it is best known at Grass Lake, one of the Chain O'Lakes in northern Illinois, and a number of the bottomland lakes and backwaters along the Illinois River where it is called the Yackee Nut or Water Chinquapin.

In the north central states there are a few other native water lilies, near relatives of the lotus, that also grow in ponds, lake margins and slow-moving streams. Two species with large floating leaves and large floating white flowers are often seen in this region but never in beds so extensive as those of the lotus. One is the Sweet-scented Water Lily, wonderfully fragrant. The other is the odorless White Water Lily or Water Nymph. The first has round waxy green leaves, pinkish underneath and sometimes 12 inches in diameter, with a cleft on one side that extends in to the stem attachment at the center. Its flowers, 3 to 6 inches broad and pure white or tinged with pink, have a center of many yellow stamens. The water nymph is similar but its flower and leaves are larger. Both kinds have long limber rubbery stems and long rootstocks in the mud.

The Yellow Pond Lily, Cow Lily or Spatterdock, is common east of the Rockies. Its leaves, with a deep notch at the base, are sometimes held above water by the thick stems. It blooms all summer, bearing yellow or greenish-yellow cup-like flowers of which the conspicuous parts are the sepals. Its petals are reduced to little fleshy knobs.

The famous Royal Water Lily, native in the Amazon River of Brazil, has creamy white flowers that turn pink or red, and gigantic floating leaves with upturned edges. The leaves, sometimes 6 feet in diameter, can support the weight of a 150-pound person.

The water lily, say the Indian legend, originated from a falling star.

DRY MILK MAY BE THE ANSWER

With farmers getting 7 cents a quart for fluid milk on the Chicago market and the consumers paying 19½ cents a quart for doorstep delivery, there is obviously a costly distribution set-up.

The answer, according to an article by Homemaking Editor Gladys Skelley in the Prairie Farmer, may be milk in dry form.

Recent improvements in dry milk are news to many. Now, dry milk can be successfully reconstituted into a liquid product that is as satisfactory a beverage as regular fluid milk out of the bottle. That has been shown in tests by a tasting panel in the University of Wisconsin home economics department.

Also, it is pointed out by research workers at the university, the use of nonfat milk solids makes it possible to more easily include milk products in the diet of persons who require increased consumption for better health.

When the nonfat milk solids were added to various recipes, it improved flavor, texture, and in many cases, color as well.

Dry milk was produced in large quantities during the war because it was easy to handle and ship, and is still being delivered in considerable quantities to foreign countries. Its big advantage now that its taste has been considerably improved, is that it is an excellent way to provide milk for people living at a considerable distance from the milk producing center.

Why Honeybees Are Important
Why do honeybees produce? First thought that comes to mind, as Della Loui points out in an article in the Prairie Farmer, is honey, and a mighty delicious, tasty sweet it can be.

Bees also produce beeswax, of course, but by far the most important work that they do is pollination of our fruit, vegetable, and legume crops. According to Mrs. Loui, there are 52 crops in the midwest that will not produce fruit or seed unless the blossoms are pollinated by bees.

It has only been in fairly recent years that farmers and fruit raisers have realized the extreme importance of bees in producing seed and fruit crops. Today they will drive as far as 50 miles to an apiarist to pay him for putting out several stands of bees on their places. In fact, points out Walter Diehnelt, well-known bee raiser of Waukesha County, Wis., most apiarists have a waiting list of farmers who want bees.

Diehnelt says one farmer told him that he raised eight times as much clover seed the first year Diehnelt put an outyard of bees on his farm.

Most fruit raisers today are careful to use DDT and other new insecticides at times when it will not harm the bees, and refrain from its use when fruit trees and other plants are in bloom.

However, much of the present danger to bees comes from small spray ring outfits who are paid so much a tree and go through an orchard and spray every tree that can be found, regardless of the blossoming stage. Airplane dust sprays also weaken the bee colonies when the conditions are not right and the dust blows to fields adjoining the ones being treated.

Can Now Have Picnics Fly - Mosquito Free

No longer do pesky flies and buzzing-bombing mosquitoes have to be the invited guests at every picnic. New DDT spraying techniques, successfully developed within the past few years, have put the nip on these pests.

Under old methods, cost of spraying parks and picnic grounds was prohibitive. Not so now, says Bill Lauk, field representative for Davey Tree Expert Co., who points out new control methods are economically safe and sound. Today many communities are preparing their recreational areas against invasion by the pests.

Fog and mist applications are the new methods whereby very fine droplets of DDT are blasted at great velocity into the air stream as opposed to the old use of hydraulic sprayers. Mist blowing permits greater area coverage with accompanying cost reduction.

Geographically, northern Ohio is one of the leaders in the DDT mist war against flies, mosquitoes and other insect malefactors. In this section, there are many ideal breeding places because of the large number of lakes and ponds. In many communities notably around Barberton, Akron, and Cuyahoga Falls, mosquito control is becoming accepted practice.

For effectiveness, two Summer applications are recommended—one along about the first week in July and the other in early August. This is satisfactory for most northern areas. In the South, the spraying periods are earlier. Some sections go in for three seasonal DDT sprays, the first one early in May.

Footwear Fancy Free

Colored shoes are one of the biggest features in footwear this spring. If you're getting a pair, choose a bag that matches to keep harmony in your wardrobe.

That's the advice of Miss Ritta Whittle, on the clothing staff of the Home Economics Department, University of Illinois College of Agriculture. She emphasizes the fact that it's important to have all parts of an ensemble go together if you want to look smartly dressed. And you can make colored shoes harmonize with an outfit by matching them with other accessories.

When you buy new shoes, be sure to find out how to clean and take care of them. This is especially important when you select colored shoes, because they'll probably require special care.

EXCUSE IT

Unlike some folks who haven't a leg to stand on, Daddy Longlegs always has a few to spare. According to CHILD CRAFT books, if a leg of this harmless creature is seized, he merely sheds it and scurries away on the remaining seven.

BUSY BEES. According to Childcraft books, long before man appeared upon the earth, bees had perfected a society in which labor was divided. The young were fed and cared for, winter provisions were stored, and each worker bee took part in the home-building and housekeeping.

SHORT STORY

The Last Cry

By NORMAN FREILICH

HE STOOD outside his uncle's room, and as he listened for a brief moment to the labored breathing coming from within, his features became distorted by some sinister emotion. For the physical wreck within the room, his uncle, stood between him and his inheritance. Only upon Jason Stoneleigh's death would he come into his estate, and only yesterday he learned from Doctor Phelps, his uncle's physician, that old Jason would perhaps live for years. It was then he had made his decision.

Alex clenched his fists as he thought how simple it would be to strangle the life out of the old man—but there was an easier way, one which would never throw an inkling of suspicion his way. His uncle kept a loaded gun in his room, eccentric as he was, he lived in fear of his life. He kept only one servant, who would be away today.

Alex smiled to himself, deeply satisfied with his plan, as he entered the room. He greeted his uncle with robust good cheer, but his uncle, a dark scowl upon his thin bony face, sat in his chair silently. There was no movement in his body.

"Aren't you feeling any better?" he asked with feigned concern, and then the eyes of the two men met, and their glance seemed to sweep aside all pretense between them.

"It's been a long wait, hasn't it, Alex," the old man said with biting contempt, "but I'm afraid it will even be longer. Doctor Phelps has been quite encouraging."

Alex edged toward the desk in which the gun would be. He opened the drawer, felt the brittle coldness of steel. He swept about to Jason Stoneleigh, and the gun was in his hand. "You miserable wretch," he slurred, "I won't have to wait a day longer."

The old man's eyes stared wide with terror. His body did not rise from his seat as though he might be frozen with fear. There was only a pitiful cry: "You'll hang for it, Alex!"

A MOMENT later, with detached calm, Alex wiped the gun clean of his own fingerprints, and then placed the weapon in the murdered man's hand. He took one last glance about the room assuring himself there was no trace of evidence.

He was sleeping soundly that night, happy in the thought that in the morning he would be a wealthy man. But it was almost midnight when he was awakened by the police. He was ordered to get into his clothes at once.

"But I don't understand," he protested, his face white and drawn. Then he succeeded in controlling his fears, realizing, of course, that this would be only a routine investigation. Surely nothing could have gone wrong. He hastened into his clothes.

Panic gripped him and his eyes, wild with sudden fear, turned desperately to Doctor Phelps.

The police drove him to the house of his uncle. It seemed all of them were awaiting him—the state's attorney men, Jason's servant—and in the background—Doctor Phelps.

"I'm here to give you gentlemen every help," he said, gravely, and the sound of his voice gave him sudden courage. "I'm terribly upset to hear of my uncle's suicide."

"Suicide? You're certain it was suicide?" The question was hurled roughly at him.

Panic gripped him, and his eyes turned desperately to Doctor Phelps. "Surely, Doctor Phelps, you can tell them how absurd it is to think otherwise. You can tell them of my uncle's brooding over his ill-health."

The doctor stepped toward Alex, his face stern, almost menacing. "I can only tell them the truth, Alex—"

"Yes, the truth," Alex pleaded. "Your uncle suffered a stroke a week ago—and the gun which killed Jason Stoneleigh was found in his right hand"—the doctor paused—"and that hand and the whole arm were paralyzed."

SMALL POTATOES

Those "soulless corporations" we are always reading about take a lot of money in the course of a year. Some of them ring the cash registers to the tune of billions. So it appears to many people that the owners of their securities are really in the velvet, and that every time we buy a corporation-produced commodity a large part of what we spend finds its way into the pockets of the lucky stockholders.

Does that sound reasonable? Well, whether it does or not, it simply isn't true for the average corporation. Here for instance, is a breakdown of last year's financial operations of one of the major automobile manufacturers.

The company took in the neat sum of $1,577,000,000. Two-thirds of it—$1,024,000,000—went right out to other companies from whom it bought materials, supplies and services. Of the remainder, wages took the lion's share—$289,000,000. The tax collector reached in to the tune of $151,000,000. Wear and tear on equipment ran up a bill of $24,000,000, and $54,000,000 had to be reinvested in the business so it could keep up with the times and the competition. Finally, $35,000,000—out of that huge $1,577,000,000 which was received from sales of its products—went to the corporation's 60,000 stockholder-owners.

The point is clear. The stockholder is pretty small potatoes when it comes to dividing up the money business takes in.

Conquest of Death

Lesson for June 19, 1949

DOCTORS TALK about conquering death, but they never do. All they can manage is to put it off a little. In all the long sad story of mankind there is only one absolute conquest of death. It happened on the first Easter morning, and it was a turning point in the history of the world. The few lines about the Resurrection, in our New Testament, would not cover the front page of this newspaper. We do not know all we want to know. But those few lines tell us enough to set us singing, they are a solid foundation for a soaring faith.

Dr. Foreman

The Mighty Act of God

WE shall be disappointed if we expect the Gospels to "explain" the Resurrection. If there is anything the stories show clearly, it is that the first persons who knew of the Resurrection were confused and shaken by it. The disciples had not expected anything like this, and they may not fully have understood what was going on.

What they were sure of, what they could not deny, was first of all that Christ rose from the dead, and also that it was God who raised him from the dead, God had beaten the one unbeatable power—death. Death, the universal conqueror, turned out for once to be the conquered.

It is only those who can believe in an all-powerful God who can fully believe in the Resurrection.

It Is The Lord

WHAT MANNER of person was Jesus, after that first Easter morning? There were some differences hard to describe, and in fact not described, only hinted at. You notice that at times it was not easy to recognize him at first. Paul refers to Christ's "glorious body" and surely there must be a glory in a person who has actually proved too strong for death to hold—a glory such as even Christ, before Calvary, had not shown. And yet—and yet, it was the same Jesus they had always known.

No Ghost

BY NIGHT, in many a "seance," mediums profess to get in touch with the spirits of the dead. If you could believe the spiritists, Shakespeare and Queen Victoria and innumerable other famous people, have come back and talked from beyond the grave. But the thing that makes the Christian church more than doubtful about such performances, is that somehow the dead-and-come-back genius is never a genius any more. Neither Shakespeare nor any other famous person has said anything worth saying through a "medium." And even these feeble ghosts cannot endure the daylight. They have to come at night.

How different were the comings of Jesus! There was nothing weird or uncanny about him. Around the supper table, or on an afternoon walk, or out on the lake shore under the morning sun... never the poor mumbling ghost of a seance, never any stupid trifles from his lips, but words of truths and comfort which the church cherishes as among the best from our Lord's mind. Jesus' resurrection is not the story of the survival of a ghost, still less the mere return of a revived and walking corpse.

It is the story of a Divine Person who conquered death, and who came back from that conquest in power and majesty, yet with all the tenderness, love and brilliance he had ever shown.

Our Hope in Him
PAUL (in I Cor. 15) makes it clear that our hope of life-beyond-death grows right out of Christ's resurrection. The enemies of Christ would have given their right eyes to stop the mouths of the men who told that story, and to prove it a lie.

But they could never do it. You cannot well stop people from believing what they have seen with their own eyes. So our hope of eternal life is not just a hope.

As Paul says, if that were all, we should be miserable men.

Why let summer heat ruin your sleep?

Bring "North Woods" coolness into your home and sleep in comfort!

Remember the oppressive summer heat of past years, and those hot, humid nights when it was almost impossible to sleep? Sometimes it seemed as if there wasn't a breath of air stirring... and no place was hotter than your own apartment or house.

This year you can beat the heat... and sleepless summer nights will be a thing of the past. Night cooling by means of fans has been used for many years in the South... and this same method is adaptable to Northern Illinois houses and apartments. A night cooling fan is designed to give a complete change of air in a room every 2 minutes, and should not be confused with the ordinary electric fan.

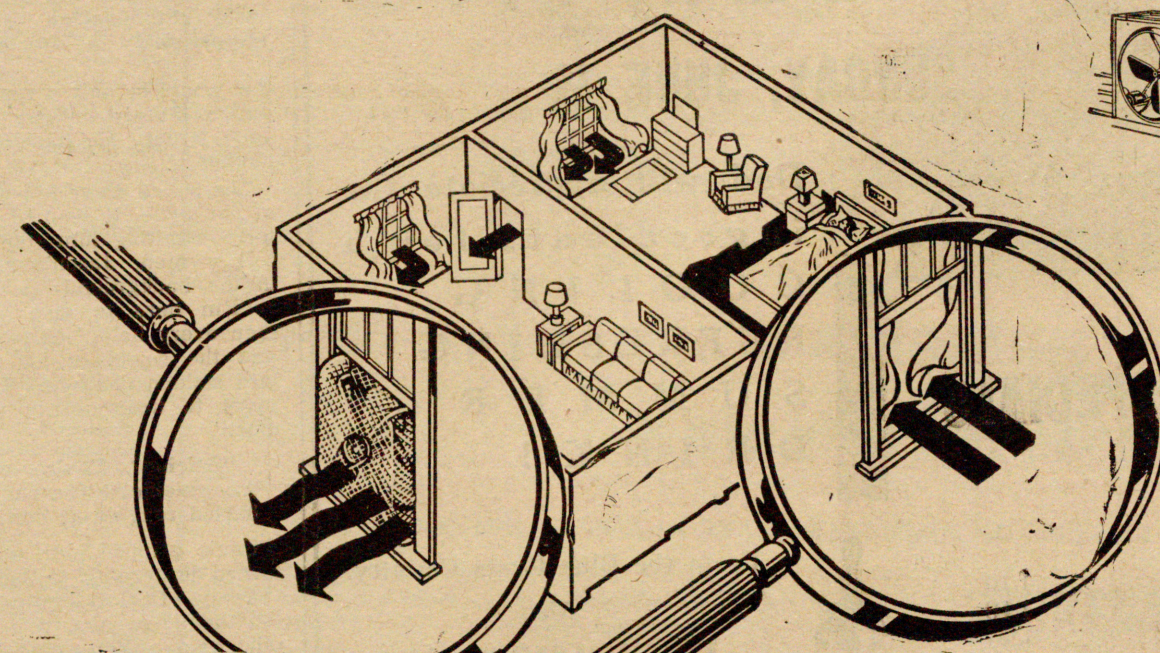

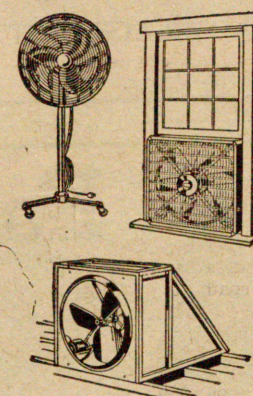

All day during the summer, the roof and walls of a building absorb heat. This heat is radiated throughout the home, raising the temperature of the air inside the building. After sunset, the temperature outside begins to lower, and often drops as much as 10° to 15° during the night. However, these lower outdoor temperatures do not help you feel cooler inside your home, unless the cooler air is brought into the rooms. A night cooling fan pulls out the "dead" hot air, and it is replaced by the fresh, cool night air from outdoors. A night cooling fan produces a gentle breeze through the rooms, absorbing heat from the walls and ceilings and evaporating perspiration from your skin... just like any other breeze.

Don't spend another sleepless night; find out now about night cooling and the comfort it can bring you.

A type for every apartment and house:

These fans come in a variety of styles and sizes... a window fan that can be quickly and easily installed in your window... or the portable model that can be set up in front of the window, are ideal for apartments. The permanently installed attic type is recommended for home owners.

How a Night Cooling Fan Works

- (1) It pulls out all stored-up heated air from your living quarters.
- (2) This air is replaced by cool night air which is drawn in through opened windows.
- (3) The gently moving cool air absorbs heat and evaporates perspiration... you feel cooler immediately.

"Wear White After Dark" is the message brought to the attention of school children in this safety poster being distributed for December display in 44,000 elementary school classrooms throughout the Chicago Motor Club's territory in Illinois and Indiana. Supplementary lesson sheets, especially designed for each age group, explains the traffic hazards created by decreased visibility and poor traction during the winter months for motorists and pedestrians alike and how to cope with them. The posters are reproductions of prize winning drawings of high school students in a national safety poster contest conducted annually by the Chicago Motor Club in cooperation with affiliated organizations of the American Automobile Association.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR—

Balaz stated, "No, you can not get a warrant here, you will have to go elsewhere." Albert, "Why? Is it not that this is a court in the United States?" J. P. Balaz, "Yes, it is true, but you will have to go elsewhere." Albert, "I will go to extremes with this case."

Mr. Kohl then presented his version and admitted that he had abused me in my own home. Albert, "I speak the truth and facts," and I stated how the appointment was arranged and how he insulted and abused me as mentioned above. J. P. Balaz, "Well, sometimes we say things that we don't mean," Albert, "Well, he insulted and abused me and I insulted and abused him and I will go to the extreme with this matter if I have to take it to higher courts." J. P. Balaz, "Can you put up $25.00 bond?" Albert, "What for? What crime have I committed? He abused me and I abused him." J. P. Balaz, "I fine you $10.00 and cost, that will be $15.00." Albert, "O.K. sir." Balaz, "To show you I am a good fellow, I will return you $5.00, that will be $10.00." Albert, "Thank you, sir." Court was adjourned.

During the court procedure, Mr. A. Knipple remarked, "Albert, you should have been elected congressman." I replied to this remark, "Thank you sir." Perhaps some day I will run for congressman. He made this remark to me as I was presenting my case.

Example: Public servant or officer enters your home, your property, insults you, abuses you, takes you to court and you are fined. If you strike back you are charged with crime. This is the kind of a case in which I was the victim. Do you call this justice? Only in one country is that method used and that is in Russia, not the United States of America.

I am not a physician to determine whether or not Mr. Kohl was in normal condition, but if he would have been normal he would have preserved his fellow citizen and not abuse him.

I want the people of these three sections of the Village to decide for themselves who was right.

I am certain that Mr. Knipple and Mr. Kohl will never be able to look up to the skies and straight into another man's eyes.

A. T. ALBERT

To the Editor:
I want to thank this press and the Editor for the opportunity of permitting me to present the truth and nothing but the truth and basic facts. I thank you, Editor and Publisher of the Mokena News Bulletin.

Road Boosters Seek Repair; What Became of $100 Million

Business men from a score of Illinois cities along U.S. Route 40 between Collinsville and the Indiana border met at the Hotel Benwood at Effingham, Friday night, June 10, to urge Governor Stevenson and state highway officials to repair or rebuild the highway at once.

The thoroughfare is in such a bad state of repair that auto clubs are rerouting St. Louis-Indianapolis traffic through Litchfield, Raymond, Taylorville, and Decatur, via U.S. 66, Ill. 48, and U.S. 36. As a result, hotels, motels, restaurants, taverns and service stations all along Route 40, the business leaders say, are suffering heavy losses, some of the larger establishments reporting a $100-a-month drop in receipts since re-routing of the traffic.

The situation came to a head after Gerre Jones, secretary of the Effingham Chamber of Commerce and Donald Hathorn, secretary of the Vandavia Chamber of Commerce, on May 5 appealed to Charles B. Casey, director of the state department of public works and buildings to institute improvements, particularly on the 32 mile stretch between Vandavia and Effingham. Casey advised the men to promote resolutions in their respective communities to awaken interest in the project. Twenty days later, Jones returned to Springfield for an audience with C. M. Hathaway, chief highway engineer.

"Mr. Hathaway granted me only two minutes for a conference, and I spent a minute and 25 seconds of that to explain who I was and what I wanted," Jones said. "When I requested a second and longer conference to go into the condition of Route 40, Hathaway replied: 'What's wrong with Route 40?'" Jones told his townspeople that he explained to the chief engineer that Route 40 was one of the worst highways in the state and that many businesses were losing money because of declining traffic.

Jones also revealed that Casey advised him that the state had no money for the improvements. When he told Effingham business men of Casey's comment, they raised the question as to what has happened to the surplus of more than $100,000,000 left in the state treasury by the outgoing Republican state administration last Nov.

They recalled that Stevenson, in his inaugural address, mentioned the fact that "We have an unencumbered balance of about 100 million dollars in the

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Don't Fence Yourself In

Every spring, Hardy Peterson and Easy Roberts patch up the stone wall that separates their farms. They walk along talking—Easy on one side, Handy on the other—picking up the fallen stones and putting them back.

Afterwards, over a friendly glass of beer, Easy says, "You know, wall-mending is a nice neighborly custom, but we really don't need that wall. We keep it up just because it happens to be there."

"Yes," says Handy, "a lot of walls and fences and boundaries keep on separating people for no good reason. Maybe we'd all be better off if some of them were torn down, instead of kept standing."

From where I sit, Handy said a mouthful. Take the "walls of intolerance" that people build up against each other. I like a temperate glass of beer now and then, you may prefer buttermilk—but that's no reason for me to criticize you, or you, me. Let's live and let-live together—making more friends and fewer "walls."
